NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, April 13, 1900.

Heads in the U. S. Senate shall no longer be openly bought and sold. That is the plain English of the unanimous report of the Senate committee of Elections, declaring that Mr. Clark of Montana is not entitled to a seat in the Senate. It is not surprising that the action of the committee should have overshadowed the Paris Ritz bill, which has passed the House and been signed by the President, as a subject of public discussion. It is far outshone in public importance. It is a notice to the millionaires of the country that the portals of the Senate are not to be opened hereafter by money alone, and it is a notice that has been needed for many years. It is creditable to the committee on Elections that its action was unanimous. There is no partisanship in the matter. It has been a matter of such shame for many years that Senators have been openly charged with buying their seats, and yet because of lack of proof, when investigations have been made, of bribery, none of the men so charged have been refused seats. There was no absolute proof of bribery in the Clark case, but his admission of having spent about a quarter of a million dollars, not to mention other evidence, was enough. It was probably because of the lack of proof of bribery that the committee reported that he was not entitled to his seat, instead of reporting in favor of expelling him. This individual in this case counts for nothing. It is the principle which deserves the endorsement and commendation of every man who believes in the future welfare of his country, which must necessarily be endorsed if corrupt political practices are to be ended.

The annual skirmish over the clause of the Agricultural Appropriation bill providing for free distribution of seeds was fought this week in the House with the usual result—victory for the seed-distributors. Representative Corlies of Michigan was both factious and ardent in his opposition to free seeds. He started in the former vein by offering an amendment providing for the free distribution of dinner pails for the laboring classes, there being, in his opinion, as much reason for giving away one as the other, but his assertion that the seed trust disposed of large quantities of worthless seeds to the government, which distributes them, was very seriously made, and deserves more attention than it has received. While the seed distribution was being discussed, Representative Shattuck of Ohio read the following verse, which he did not claim to be original, but to represent the sentiment of the average farmer who receives the free seeds:

"I really hate the thought of spring
With its delightful sun.
For well I know the seed will bring
A pack from Washington.
A little package, fifty bushels,
No package charge is there,
And it contains those little seeds—
The kind that never grow.
I say good-bye to seed Congressmen,
Be careful of our coin.
I say the memorandum a page
From Ohio is this one:
And when the proper time arrives
For to enrich the land,
He sends us in the little seeds—
The ones that never grow."

Mr. Quay will be seated as Senator. That was settled when the Senate agreed to vote on the case April 24th, as it has been generally admitted for some time that it was only a question of getting a vote.

Admiral Dewey very indignantly denies the statement made in a number of newspapers that he intended to withdraw his name as a candidate for President, and still says that he believes the people want him to be President and will elect him regardless of the politicians who poke fun at his candidacy.

Secretary Clegg's figures, sent to the House in response to a resolution of inquiry, make it very plain that a reduction of some $60,000,000 could be made in internal revenue taxes not only without injury to the Treasury but with benefit, as a big surplus is always dangerous. But the prospects for legislation for a reduction at this session of Congress are not very bright; the leaders are too anxious to hurry adjournment, so they can give their time to the Presidential campaign.

Spreads Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist of Baltimore, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitter I have handled in 20 years. You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of the bowels, stomach, liver, kidneys, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, cures countless maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, run-down man or woman. Price 50c, sold by John Boyden & Son, druggists."
